

BEAR & RANGER

June 30, 2006

Bear – 9 months old Labrador Retriever (AKA Big Guy) green collar

Bear is a big clown that thinks he is still a little puppy. Bear loves to play in water, fetch tennis balls, chew on toys and play with Ranger (chase and chew on him too). He would jump in the shower with me if I gave him the opportunity.

Ranger – 6 months old Labrador Mix (AKA Little Guy) red collar

Ranger is a little dog that thinks he is a big dog until he gets hurt (he hides under furniture when the play gets too rough for him). He is Bear's sidekick and wants every toy that Bear is enjoying. He loves chewing on toys and Bear's collar. Ranger has separation anxiety he gets very sad when we leave him so we have to keep him occupied!

Together they should be called moose and squirrel because Bear is all clumsy legs like a kid moose and Ranger is squirrely and always up to something. Basically they needed owners that could spend a lot of time training and exercising them. I take them for two walks daily (45min to an hour each) and have started to jog them a little. They still have lots of energy even after all that!
